

Sunday of Divine Mercy

Alleluia! Christ is risen!

We have journeyed together throughout Lent in hopeful anticipation of Christ's resurrection. Celebrating the Good News that comes with the empty tomb, we live to testify to the resurrection of our savior. This is especially good news for us in relationship with an addict, who can tend to suffer from a sense of isolation and shame.

We have been crucified by the impact of addiction, only to be offered resurrection through mercy and self-discovery. We were saved and called to teach those who suffer. We show our wounds to the newcomer trying to make sense of their situation, to the sage old timer, and to the complacent member on thin ice. We offer ourselves, our histories of denial, excessive control, self-obsession, pain and crucifixion and, most importantly, our resurrection.

Through the guiding principles of family recovery, we get a unique chance to surrender our burdens to God. When the forces of honesty and openness meet, spiritual growth takes place. God moves mountains, but He asks that we pick up the shovel.

The Church recognizes the Second Sunday of Easter as Divine Mercy Sunday. This day concludes what is known as the Easter Octave and calls us to rejoice in the merciful love of God as it is revealed in the life, death, and resurrection of Jesus Christ. The Gospel Reading this Sunday testifies to the peace that Christ brings into our lives, overcoming fear and uncertainty:

*On the evening of that first day of the week,
when the doors were locked,
where the disciples were,
for fear of the Jews,
Jesus came and stood in their midst
and said to them, "Peace be with you."
When he had said this, he showed them his hands and his side.
The disciples rejoiced when they saw the Lord.
Jesus said to them again, "Peace be with you.
As the Father has sent me, so I send you."
And when he had said this,
he breathed on them and said to them,
"Receive the Holy Spirit.
Whose sins you forgive are forgiven them,
and whose sins you retain are retained."*

After Jesus's crucifixion, his disciples were hiding out hoping they wouldn't be next. When Jesus arrives, he simply offers a word of peace, shows the wounds of his death, and reminds them that they are to be sent out into the world. However, they will not be alone as the power of the Holy Spirit—which dwells in us today—will be their advocate.

We can find comfort in the support from others who have been in a similar situation and testify to the presence of God in their lives today. In a very Christian way, we gain trust when we're privileged to see the wounds of those in our fellowship. With the witness of others, we can align with the spirit of Divine Mercy and proclaim, "Jesus, I trust in you!"

- What is it like for you to share honestly and openly in a Christian recovery fellowship?
 - How have others shown their wounds to you and how has it been helpful?

- What actions, prayers, devotions, or spiritual routines strengthen your trust in God on a regular basis?

Peace and Easter Blessings

All of us at Catholic in Recovery wish you a very blessed Easter. It is a gift to journey together on our spiritual walk, and we hopefully pronounce the Resurrection of our Lord following His crucifixion and sacrificial death.

May you and your family live as Easter people and know that freedom and new life awaits us all.
